California Claret

No sham, no humbug about it, but an American label on an American Claret. It doesn't sail under a French flag—this Claret came to us direct from California, nearly a year ago. It is old and the quality first-class—much superior to a French Claret, which costs double. It is bottled by us at our place of business, at the most favorable time, and will be found brilliant. One hundred dozen in stock, of recent bottling.

Price, per dozen, quarts, - $2.50.
Price, per dozen, pints, - $1.75.

Mr. DeWolf Hopper and the members of his splendid company, which is said to be the largest and best he has yet had, will present that delightfully funny comic opera, entitled "Dr. Syntax," for the first time in this city on next Monday evening and the production, which was given at the Broadway theater, New York city, for three months, will be given in its entirety. The composition is a sprightly one, and its libretto, which was written by J. Chaever Goodwin, is in his best vein, while Woolson Moore, who has set to music so many of Mr. Hopper's successes, is responsible for the score. Sales of seats is now open.

Of all the works which Paul M. Potter has been the dramatizer of his "Trilby" is the greatest. He was in perfect accord with Du Maurier, caught absolutely the spirit of the book, knew thoroughly the characters and made not a mistake in presenting them in action. His dramatization is unique in the sense that he departed slightly from the author in making Trilby leave Little Billie, not in a self-sacrificing way or because she promised to do so, but because she wants to. He puts the heroine completely under the mesmeric influence of Svengali and if anything by so doing, improves the development of the plot. "Trilby" will be presented on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 23 and 24. There will be a special matinee on Wednesday. Sale of seats is now open for all the performances.

Sale of seats for the special matinee opens this morning.

Grand Opera House.

The attraction to-night and to-morrow night will be "The Police Inspector." There will be matinee to-day and to-morrow. The matinee prices are ten cents and twenty cents. In the evening reserved seats thirty cents and fifty cents.

This drama was written by Will R. Wilson, a New York newspaper man, and is a reflection of part of what he has seen of police life in the metropolis. The play is extremely sensational, dealing with crime and its detection. The action takes place in various parts of New York city, which are faithfully reproduced upon the stage. Besides Inspector Byrnes, a number of typical characters seen in the lower part of New York are shown. When the play was first introduced, it was found to be a little sombre. Accordingly it has been lightened up a little since then. Several songs and dance specialties are now regularly introduced. Of the company producing it this year Florence Gerald, the leading woman, was formerly the star of "Wages of Sin," and some of the others have been with Sol Smith Russell. Chicago papers say that Miss Gerald is effective as the adventuress.

W. S. Reeves' great production.

"Hands Across the Sea," will be presented on Monday and Tuesday evenings next week. There will be a matinee on both days.

Poll's Wonderful Theater.

Many of the visiting Heptasophs have attended the Wonderful theater to see the Donaxettas in their funny burlesque initiation, and a large delegation of Elks have engaged seats for tonight's performance. Allen May is to do a special honor to the Elks by putting in his illustrated song entitled "Fallen by the Wayside," which is especially descriptive of Elk principles. Mr. May has a rich baritone voice, and with the aid of pictures thrown on the screen by the dramatic process makes his songs particularly pleasing. Others who highly please all are the pretty Washburn sisters, Clayton and Jeanette, with their trick mule Jasper, and Charley Harris and Nellie Walters. Next week Harry Leclair and George Leslie will present their brilliant portrait piece entitled "That Woman," supported by a very powerful company.

THE STATE MEDICAL SOCIETY.

Reception to the Delegates From Other States—Reports of Committees—Interesting Papers Read.

Hartford, May 23.—At the annual meeting of the Connecticut Medical society this morning Dr. N. E. Woodin of Bridgeport, the secretary, read his report, and there was a reception to the delegates from other state societies. The delegates are: Vermont Medical society, J. M. Clark of Burlington; Lyman Rogers of Bennington; Massachusetts Medical society, T. F. Brock of Springfield; Albert Wood of Worcester; Medical society of New Jersey, J. A. E. of Arlington; Medical society of New York, Reynolds Webb Wilcox of New York.

Reports of committees on matters of public interest in the state were made as follows: Typhoid fever, Irving W. Lyon of Hartford; Frederick H. Wiering of Litchfield; Joseph B. Hall of Hartford and Arthur J. Wolf of Hartford.

The use of diphtheria anti-toxine in Connecticut—Irving W. Lyon of Hartford; Elbridge W. Pierce of Meriden; Everett J. McKnight of Hartford; Charles C. Godfrey of Bridgeport; L. W. Bacon, Jr., of New Haven; Frederick M. Wilson of Bridgeport.

Papers were read by:

William J. Tracey of Norwalk; Edwin B. Lyon of New Britain; Henry Fleischner of New Haven; Benjamin A. Cheney of New Haven; Frederick Schavoor of Stamford; Arthur N. Alling of New Haven; Henry S. Miles of Bridgeport; Gustavus Elliot of New Haven; John W. Wright of Bridgeport; Max Mallhouse of New Haven; N. Nickerson of Meriden; Stephen J. Maher of New Haven; James N. Kenleton of Middletown; R. A. McDowell of New Haven; W. S. MacLaren of Litchfield; George C. Jarvis of Hartford; Charles E. Taft of Hartford; John F. Dowling of Enfield; James K. Mason of Suffield; Lucy C. Peckham of New Haven; Frank W. Wright of New Haven; Charles D. Alton of Hartford; Thomas D. Crothers of Hartford.

Both Were Drowned.

Hudson, N. Y., May 23.—The steamer Isabella struck a boat containing two men in Catekill creek this forenoon. One was knocked overboard and the other went to his assistance. Both were drowned.

THE POLICE TRIALS.

Manifestation of a Policeman's Disgust at the Proceedings by Throwing Up His Shield.

New York, May 23.—Commissioner Parker presided at the trials of delinquent policemen to-day. The petty offenders were plainly nervous as they assembled in the corridors, for Mr. Parker has taken part as assistant judge in nearly all the cases that have come before the new commissioners, and an estimation of his capacity and perspicacity has been passed along from corner to corner over the patrol posts. He is as keen to see a falsehood as Commissioner Roosevelt, has more skill as a cross-examiner, and is quick to show what all know, that the old excuses are often lies. How speedily the police have recognized this was disclosed in a bit of conversation overheard on the stairs before the court opened.

A policeman, charged evidently with a petty offense, had no lawyer. He was taking counsel of an older "copper," one who has often been tried for similar misconduct.

"I don't think you better had," said the red-faced adviser. "He's onto that. Maybe you could make a bit by ownin' up an' takin' yer medicine."

The first case was based on a trivial complaint, but with an application for an adjournment was submitted a certificate of illness. "Is this a police surgeon's certificate?" asked the commissioner. "Is that the way he spells aberration, a-b-o-r-r-a-t-i-o-n?" No reply. "Dexter, is it? Well, I'll keep this certificate and adjourn the case."

The several succeeding cases brought out nothing either directly or indirectly. F. J. Egan was off post, but being, as he confessed, in a rear house in the rear of a rear alley, he told the commissioner he prevented a burglary. "Did you explain that, then, to the roundsmen?" asked the commissioner. "No," was the answer. "I did. I didn't. I don't think I can say positive I did, but—" That was all.

John M. Hayes, Jr., of the Fourth precinct, neglected his duty from 2 o'clock one morning until 2:30. Complaints had been made of "bums" in the rear house of his post, so he went in there. How did you spend the time? "Funtin' around the halls," he forgot to explain at the time. Mike P. O'Neill, who was "not at his relieving point," remembered to-day that he heard a "calling and noise" down the street, and went to suppress the disorder. Michael F. Geary and M. S. Sullivan were "seen together on a beer keg." They were not squatting; they were squatting, but not a beer keg. They respectfully submitted that the roundsmen mistook two street-cleaning men for them. Besides there were a lot of burglaries near there and they were conferring about them.

At the close of Henry A. Pickle's defense for being off post, he charged the roundsmen with having threatened to drive him out of the department. The commissioner recalled the roundsmen, and when the policeman said the roundsmen made the threat only "unless he done his duty right," the commissioner dropped the matter with the remark that such menace was all right anyway.

Patrolman James A. Wells of the Eldridge street station was arraigned on a charge preferred by Roundsmen Farr, who stated that on May 9, at 3:35 o'clock in the afternoon, he found Wells neglecting duty by standing in the hallway of a flavor saloon. In his own behalf Wells said the roundsmen had told him that he, the roundsmen, would put him out of the business. "When was this complaint served on you?" asked Commissioner Parker. "What complaint?" said Wells. "This complaint. What one do you suppose?" said the commissioner. Without answering the commissioner, Wells faced the roundsmen and said: "I don't want to talk to this man; I am sick of this business, anyhow." Then he turned on his heel and walked toward the door.

"Come back here," shouted the commissioner.

Wells returned, and when Commissioner Parker asked for an explanation of his action, Wells said: "I am sick of this business. I am going down to the house and turn in my tin," meaning his shield. He turned and walked out without being detained.

Wells was appointed to the force March 19, 1891.
